

Kitchen & Kettle

Apothecary Journal

NOT MEDICAL ADVICE — JUST A RECORD BOOK.

Track your herbs from harvest to remedy. Keep what worked. Learn from what didn't.

For the kitchen, not the clinic.

How to Use This Journal

This is not a guide to herbal medicine. It's a blank record book — a place to track what you grow, harvest, dry, and make in your own kitchen. No dosage charts, no treatment recommendations. Just pages for your notes.

Fill in what matters to you. Skip what doesn't. The journal doesn't judge. If you're new to herbs, start with the harvest log and tea blends pages — those are the hardest to remember and the most rewarding to look back on.

What's Inside

- Herb inventory — what you have on hand, when you got it, where it came from
- Harvest logs — what you picked, when, where, and how much
- Drying records — start to finish, method and yield
- Salve recipes — ingredients, method, date made, notes on the batch
- Tea blends — what went in, proportions, how it tasted
- Tincture records — herb, menstruum, ratios, start and decant dates
- Notes — blank space for whatever doesn't fit a category

Type directly into this journal — your entries save to your device automatically. No account needed. Clearing your browser data clears your entries.

Herb Inventory

What's in your cupboard right now. Update when you use something or bring something new home.

Harvest Logs

What you picked, when, and where. Build a year-over-year record of your best spots and timing.

Drying Records

Track each batch from fresh to finished. You'll know what dried well and what didn't.

[illegible]

Salve Recipes

Record what you made and what you'd change next time. One page, two batches.

SALVE #1

NAME

DATE

BATCH

INGREDIENTS

SALVE #2

NAME

DATE

BATCH

INGREDIENTS

Tea Blends

What went in, how it tasted, and whether you'd make it again.

BLEND #1

NAME

DATE

INGREDIENTS

BLEND #2

NAME

DATE

INGREDIENTS

Tincture Records

Herb, menstruum, ratio, and dates. The details you'll want six months from now.

[illegible]

Notes

For whatever doesn't fit a category. Observations, ideas, questions to research later.

NOTES

NOTES

NOTES

NOTES

Keep good records

The best herbalist you know is the one who wrote things down. This journal doesn't tell you what to put in a tincture — it just makes sure you remember what you did when the tincture turns out great and you want to make it again.

Not medical advice. Just a record book.

Works because it works.

Kitchen & Kettle

A quieter way to run a kitchen.