Kitchen & Kettle

Moon Journal

A YEAR OF LISTENING TO YOUR RHYTHM.

Track the full moons, follow the waxing and waning, and notice what changes in you as the year turns.

The Old Names

Before calendars, people named moons after what was happening on the ground. The Worm Moon meant thawing soil and returning robins. The Strawberry Moon meant it was time to pick. The Harvest Moon meant work late into the night by its light.

These names come from the Algonquin people of the northeastern United States, passed along by farmers and settlers who adopted them because they made sense. Each name tells you what the world is doing that month.

How to Use This Journal

Each full moon gets one page with the story behind its name and a prompt for reflection. Then four cycle pages — 🌑 New Moon, 🌒 Waxing, 🌕 Full, 🌘 Waning — give you space to track your own rhythm through that lunar cycle. At the end of each season, a seasonal recap page helps you step back and see the bigger pattern.

🌑 New Moon — Start. Set intentions. Plant seeds.

🌒 Waxing Moon — Build. Take action. Move forward.

🌕 Full Moon — Reflect. Notice what came together. Celebrate.

🌘 Waning Moon — Release. Let go. Clear space.

HONEST NOTE

This journal gives you a framework for checking in with yourself as the year turns. Use it however makes sense to you — agriculturally, spiritually, as a monthly reflection practice, or just because you like the moon names. There's no wrong way.

🐺 Wolf Moon

JANUARY

The deep cold of midwinter. Wolves howled outside villages — hungry, close, louder in the frozen air. The Wolf Moon is the moon of endurance. Everything is still. Everything is waiting.

What are you waiting on right now? What's dormant that you trust will wake up in its own time?

🐺🌑 New Moon

BEGIN

Wolf Moon cycle

> The moon is dark. This is the start. Plant seeds. Small intentions count.

What you're starting

What you need

How you'll know it's working

🐺 🌒 Waxing Moon

BUILD

Wolf Moon cycle

> The moon grows toward full. Energy builds. Take action on what you started.

What you're building

What's helping

What resistance you're facing

🐺🌕 Full Moon

REFLECT

Wolf Moon cycle

> The moon is fully lit. Pause and look around. Notice what came together. No action required.

What came to fruition

What you're noticing

What you're celebrating

🐺 🌘 Waning Moon

RELEASE

Wolf Moon cycle

> The moon shrinks toward dark. Let things go. Clear space for the next cycle.

What you're letting go of

What you're finishing

What you learned to carry forward

❄️ Snow Moon

FEBRUARY

The heaviest snow usually falls under this moon. Some tribes called it the Hunger Moon — the hardest month for hunting, stores running low, everyone watching the sky and waiting for the thaw that hasn't come yet.

What's running low? What do you need more of — not just things, but patience, energy, hope?

❄️ 🌑 New Moon

BEGIN

Snow Moon cycle

> The moon is dark. This is the start. Plant seeds.

What you're starting

What you need

How you'll know it's working

❄️🌒 Waxing Moon

BUILD

Snow Moon cycle

> The moon grows toward full. Energy builds.

What you're building

What's helping

What resistance you're facing

❄️ 🌕 Full Moon

REFLECT

Snow Moon cycle

> The moon is fully lit. Pause and look around.

What came to fruition

What you're noticing

What you're celebrating

❄️🌘 Waning Moon

RELEASE

Snow Moon cycle

> The moon shrinks toward dark. Let things go.

What you're letting go of

What you're finishing

What you learned to carry forward

🌨️ Cold Moon

DECEMBER

The longest nights. The cold settles in for real. Everything is dormant, quiet, reduced to its essentials. The Cold Moon is about rest — not the rest you choose, but the rest the world forces on you when the ground freezes and the light is gone by four.

What are you ready to rest from? What can wait until the light comes back?

🌨️🌑 New Moon

BEGIN

Cold Moon cycle

> The moon is dark. This is the start.

What you're starting

What you need

How you'll know it's working

🌨️🌒 Waxing Moon

BUILD

Cold Moon cycle

> The moon grows toward full. Energy builds.

What you're building

What's helping

What resistance you're facing

🌨️🌕 Full Moon

REFLECT

Cold Moon cycle

> The moon is fully lit. Pause and look around.

What came to fruition

What you're noticing

What you're celebrating

🌨️🌘 Waning Moon

RELEASE

Cold Moon cycle

> The moon shrinks toward dark. Let things go.

What you're letting go of

What you're finishing

What you learned to carry forward

Winter Moons

WOLF · SNOW · COLD

Winter moons rise early and stay long. The world is quiet. This is the season of rest — not laziness, but the real, deep kind where nothing is urgent and the ground is doing its own work underground. The garden is asleep. The kitchen runs on root vegetables and preserved things from fall. Candles get lit earlier.

🐺 Wolf Moon January — endurance, waiting, trusting what's dormant

❄️ Snow Moon February — hunger, scarcity, watching for the thaw

🌨️ Cold Moon December — rest, darkness, the long night

Worm Moon

MARCH

The ground softens. Earthworms appear in the thawed soil, and the robins come back. This is the moon of first signs — not spring yet, but the promise of it. Sap runs in the maples. The light changes.

What's the first small sign that something is changing for you? What's softening?

New Moon

BEGIN

Worm Moon cycle

> The moon is dark. This is the start.

What you're starting

What you need

How you'll know it's working

Waxing Moon

BUILD

Worm Moon cycle

> The moon grows toward full. Energy builds.

What you're building

What's helping

What resistance you're facing

Full Moon

REFLECT

Worm Moon cycle

> The moon is fully lit. Pause and look around.

What came to fruition

What you're noticing

What you're celebrating

Waning Moon

RELEASE

Worm Moon cycle

> The moon shrinks toward dark. Let things go.

What you're letting go of

What you're finishing

What you learned to carry forward

Pink Moon

APRIL

Named for wild ground phlox — one of the first flowers of spring, a low pink carpet spreading through the woods before the trees leaf out. Not the color pink in the sky. The color pink on the ground.

What's starting to bloom, even if it's small? What's showing up that you didn't plant?

🌸 🌑 New Moon

BEGIN

Pink Moon cycle

> The moon is dark. This is the start.

What you're starting

What you need

How you'll know it's working

🌸 🌒 Waxing Moon

BUILD

Pink Moon cycle

> The moon grows toward full. Energy builds.

What you're building

What's helping

What resistance you're facing

🌸🌕 Full Moon

REFLECT

Pink Moon cycle

> The moon is fully lit. Pause and look around.

What came to fruition

What you're noticing

What you're celebrating

🌸 🌘 Waning Moon

RELEASE

Pink Moon cycle

> The moon shrinks toward dark. Let things go.

What you're letting go of

What you're finishing

What you learned to carry forward

🌺 Flower Moon

MAY

Everything blooms at once. The world goes from brown and gray to green and loud almost overnight. This is the moon of abundance — not the harvest kind, but the bursting, messy, can't-keep-up kind.

What's growing faster than you expected? What needs your attention before it gets away from you?

🌺🌑 New Moon

BEGIN

Flower Moon cycle

> The moon is dark. This is the start.

What you're starting

What you need

How you'll know it's working

🌺🌒 Waxing Moon

BUILD

Flower Moon cycle

> The moon grows toward full. Energy builds.

What you're building

What's helping

What resistance you're facing

🌺🌕 Full Moon

REFLECT

Flower Moon cycle

> The moon is fully lit. Pause and look around.

What came to fruition

What you're noticing

What you're celebrating

🌺 🌘 Waning Moon

RELEASE

Flower Moon cycle

> The moon shrinks toward dark. Let things go.

What you're letting go of

What you're finishing

What you learned to carry forward

Spring Moons

WORM · PINK · FLOWER

Spring moons feel urgent. Everything happens fast — the thaw, the bloom, the burst of green. The garden wakes up and immediately demands attention. The kitchen shifts from storage to fresh things. These moons are about starting, noticing, keeping up.

🪱 Worm Moon March — thaw, first signs, the ground softening

🌸 Pink Moon April — first flowers, what's showing up unasked

🌺 Flower Moon May — everything at once, the rush of growth

🍓 Strawberry Moon

JUNE

Strawberries ripen. This moon marks the first real harvest of the year — the first thing you can eat straight off the plant, warm from the sun, no cooking required. A short window. If you don't pick them, they're gone.

What's ready to harvest in your life right now? What will pass if you don't catch it?

🍓 🌑 New Moon

BEGIN

Strawberry Moon cycle

> The moon is dark. This is the start.

What you're starting

What you need

How you'll know it's working

🍓🌒 Waxing Moon

BUILD

Strawberry Moon cycle

> The moon grows toward full. Energy builds.

What you're building

What's helping

What resistance you're facing

🍓 🌕 Full Moon

REFLECT

Strawberry Moon cycle

> The moon is fully lit. Pause and look around.

What came to fruition

What you're noticing

What you're celebrating

🍓🌘 Waning Moon

RELEASE

Strawberry Moon cycle

> The moon shrinks toward dark. Let things go.

What you're letting go of

What you're finishing

What you learned to carry forward

Buck Moon

JULY

Bucks grow new antlers, still covered in velvet. The summer is at full tilt — heat, growth, long days that feel like they'll never end. Thunderstorms roll through in the afternoons. Everything is at its peak and slightly too much.

What's at full strength right now? What's too much? What are you growing that you haven't shown anyone yet?

New Moon

BEGIN

Buck Moon cycle

> The moon is dark. This is the start.

What you're starting

What you need

How you'll know it's working

Waxing Moon

BUILD

Buck Moon cycle

> The moon grows toward full. Energy builds.

What you're building

What's helping

What resistance you're facing

🦌 🌕 Full Moon

REFLECT

Buck Moon cycle

> The moon is fully lit. Pause and look around.

What came to fruition

What you're noticing

What you're celebrating

Waning Moon

RELEASE

Buck Moon cycle

> The moon shrinks toward dark. Let things go.

What you're letting go of

What you're finishing

What you learned to carry forward

🐟 Sturgeon Moon

AUGUST

The Great Lakes were full of sturgeon under this moon — huge, ancient fish, easy to catch. The gardens are overflowing. The preserving begins in earnest. This moon is about the work of gathering in.

What are you gathering? What needs to be put by before the season turns?

🐟🌑 New Moon

BEGIN

Sturgeon Moon cycle

> The moon is dark. This is the start.

What you're starting

What you need

How you'll know it's working

🐟🌓 Waxing Moon

BUILD

Sturgeon Moon cycle

> The moon grows toward full. Energy builds.

What you're building

What's helping

What resistance you're facing

🐟 🌕 Full Moon

REFLECT

Sturgeon Moon cycle

> The moon is fully lit. Pause and look around.

What came to fruition

What you're noticing

What you're celebrating

🐟🌘 Waning Moon

RELEASE

Sturgeon Moon cycle

> The moon shrinks toward dark. Let things go.

What you're letting go of

What you're finishing

What you learned to carry forward

Summer Moons

STRAWBERRY · BUCK · STURGEON

Summer moons are warm and late-rising. The days are long enough that the moon almost feels like an afterthought — until you're outside after dark and notice it hanging there, orange and huge near the horizon. The garden is producing faster than you can pick. The kitchen is full of bowls of tomatoes and peaches.

🍓 Strawberry Moon June — first harvest, catching what's ripe

🦌 Buck Moon July — full strength, too much, new growth

🐟 Sturgeon Moon August — gathering in, preserving, the work of abundance

🌽 Corn Moon

SEPTEMBER

Corn is ready. Sometimes called the Harvest Moon when it falls closest to the equinox — the moon that rises right after sunset for several nights in a row, giving farmers extra light to bring in the crops. The year's work shows its results.

What's the harvest of your year so far? What did you plant (in any sense) that's come through?

🌽🌑 New Moon

BEGIN

Corn Moon cycle

> The moon is dark. This is the start.

What you're starting

What you need

How you'll know it's working

🌽🌒 Waxing Moon

BUILD

Corn Moon cycle

> The moon grows toward full. Energy builds.

What you're building

What's helping

What resistance you're facing

🌽🌕 Full Moon

REFLECT

Corn Moon cycle

> The moon is fully lit. Pause and look around.

What came to fruition

What you're noticing

What you're celebrating

🌽🌘 Waning Moon

RELEASE

Corn Moon cycle

> The moon shrinks toward dark. Let things go.

What you're letting go of

What you're finishing

What you learned to carry forward

🏹 Hunter's Moon

OCTOBER

The fields are cleared, the animals are fattened for winter, and there's nothing left to hide behind. The Hunter's Moon rises bright after sunset, same as the Harvest Moon — extra light for the hunt. The world is stripping down.

What's been cleared away? What's visible now that wasn't before?

🏹🌑 New Moon

BEGIN

Hunter's Moon cycle

> The moon is dark. This is the start.

What you're starting

What you need

How you'll know it's working

🏹🌒 Waxing Moon

BUILD

Hunter's Moon cycle

> The moon grows toward full. Energy builds.

What you're building

What's helping

What resistance you're facing

🏹🌕 Full Moon

REFLECT

Hunter's Moon cycle

> The moon is fully lit. Pause and look around.

What came to fruition

What you're noticing

What you're celebrating

🏹🌘 Waning Moon

RELEASE

Hunter's Moon cycle

> The moon shrinks toward dark. Let things go.

What you're letting go of

What you're finishing

What you learned to carry forward

Beaver Moon

NOVEMBER

Beavers are building their winter dams, working fast before the freeze. This was also the moon to set beaver traps before the ponds iced over — securing warm furs for the winter ahead. Preparation, not panic.

What are you building to get through the winter? What shelter are you creating — for yourself or for someone else?

New Moon

BEGIN

Beaver Moon cycle

> The moon is dark. This is the start.

What you're starting

What you need

How you'll know it's working

  Waxing Moon

BUILD

Beaver Moon cycle

> The moon grows toward full. Energy builds.

What you're building

What's helping

What resistance you're facing

 Full Moon

REFLECT

Beaver Moon cycle

> The moon is fully lit. Pause and look around.

What came to fruition

What you're noticing

What you're celebrating

  Waning Moon

RELEASE

Beaver Moon cycle

> The moon shrinks toward dark. Let things go.

What you're letting go of

What you're finishing

What you learned to carry forward

Autumn Moons

CORN · HUNTER'S · BEAVER

Autumn moons are the best moons — bright, early-rising, the Harvest Moon giving you extra light for extra work. The garden is winding down. The kitchen smells like apples and squash and bread again. These moons are about gathering what you grew, clearing what's done, and getting ready.

🌽 Corn Moon September — the main harvest, what the year produced

🏹 Hunter's Moon October — stripping down, seeing clearly

🦫 Beaver Moon November — building shelter, preparing for winter

Notes

For anything that doesn't fit a specific moon or cycle. Observations, patterns, things you want to remember.

NOTES

NOTES

NOTES

NOTES

Go outside and look up

The moon will keep rising — same phases, same rhythm, same quiet pull on the tides and the soil and whatever draws you to look up at it. The journal is a way to mark time. To look back after a year and see what grew and what didn't and what you let go of without meaning to. However you use it — however the moons speak to you — that's the right way.

Works because it works.